Cape Canaveral Space Force Museum

ccspacemuseum.org

Open: View website for tour info. Stand where America entered the Space Race - and encounter the machines that made history possible. Headquartered at Launch Complex 26, the historic site of the 1958 Explorer I launch and pioneering bioflight missions that helped chart the path to human spaceflight, the Cape Canaveral

Space Force Museum preserves both the hardware and spirit of America's ventures into space. Walk through the original blockhouse and stand at the launch pad where the nation first reached orbit. Nearby, visit Launch Complex 5/6, where Alan Shepard began America's journey with the first human spaceflight of Project Mercury. Then explore Hangar C, home to more than 40 full-size restored rockets, missiles, and space artifacts. Spanning more than 75 years of aerospace achievement across multiple historic locations, this is more than a museum visit - it's an authentic encounter with the birthplace of American launch operations.
